

Repointing projects

Surprising as it may seem, a high percentage of our workload is involved in the repointing of relatively new buildings (less than seven years old). We regularly replace mortar that is of inadequate strength (cement weak), incorrectly laid or finished, or is the wrong colour.

The sooner inadequate mortar is detected and replaced the better overall job will result. Mortar replacement may require extensive installation of scaffolding and other access provisions with the attendant impact on access and landscaping. Attending to deficient mortar quickly will also head off any subsequent structural defects that may occur as a result of ignoring mortar faults and allowing degradation to continue.

This partial list of new buildings repointed is presented as a representative sample of the nature and extent of repointing projects undertaken.
